THE PSYCHOLOGICAL IMPACT OF TESTICULAR CANCER

There are a variety of mental health considerations for men who have been diagnosed with testicular cancer, and those who love and support them.

Feelings of depression over the loss of a testicle.

Anxiety about being diagnosed with cancer.

Fear of infertility or not being able to father a child.

Concern about deformity or testicular appearance after surgery.

Partners and loved ones can support a man diagnosed with testicular cancer by strongly encouraging him to seek mental health care, in addition to the cancer care he is receiving.
